A Great Alabama Grapevine.

There is in Baldwin county, about two and a half miles from Daphne, at a place once known as the village, a mammoth grapevine, that is much larger than the California vine shown at the centennial, but it is living and its age is unknown, for it was there before the foot of the white man ever trod the soil of Baldwin county. This vine measures sixty-three inches around, not at the ground, but fully six feet above, while its branches some nine feet from the ground and, running along the dense undergrowth there, covers several acres. These are facts uncontrovertible, and can prove itself. I myself made pictures of it before I learned of the California vine, and I also measured it myself. I always exhibit this great product of the south wherever I exhibit southern views. I know of no tradition connected with it, but history informs me that a great battle took place about it, between General Jackson and the Creek Indians about the time of the Fort Mims massacre, and there are several Indian mounds about the place. I do not know the variety, but think it is the common fox grape of the country.—Floral and Family Magazine.

Beautiful Women.

Every woman should have the beauty, vivacity and vigor of perfect health. A strong stomach is the first essential to physical beauty in either man or woman. Nine-tenths of the sickness of the human race comes from weak digestion. Thousands of people, after years of discouragement, have tried Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and regained their health. There is nothing like it for the stomach troubles. See that a private Revenue Stamp covers the neck of the bottle.

It is not helps, but obstacles, not facilities, but difficulties, that make men.

SHE SUBDUES INDIANS.
Woman Physician Employed by the Government Compels Moquis to Submit to Vaccination.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The smallpox is so bad among the Moqui Indians in Arizona and is spreading so fast that there is fear that the whole tribe may be exterminated. In order to stop the plague Miss Mary McKee, the agency physician, with the assistance of Mr. Shoemaker, the farmer employed by the Government to teach the Indians the science of agriculture and the use of modern implements, undertook to vaccinate the entire tribe, fumigate their houses and burn the effects of those who have died or were suffering from the disease.

The Indians made a stubborn resistance. They are fatalists. Their religion teaches them that a sick person is under the ban of the evil spirit, who can only be driven away by incantations and the use of the magic arts. Therefore it is not only difficult, but almost impossible to convince them that smallpox can be prevented by the use of simple and ordinary precautions. Miss McKee decided to take matters into her own hands, and she ordered up the entire tribe for vaccination. The agent of the Moqui Indians, a man named Hazlett, also has the Navajos under his charge, and lives with the latter tribe. But he readily gave his permission for this brave little woman doctor to use her own judgment in stamping out the plague.

The Indians did not take the vaccination seriously. They are accustomed to a good deal of self-torture, and a little scraping of the skin and soreness of the arm was not a matter of much consequence to them, but when Miss McKee invaded their houses and drove them out and put in her pans of sulphur they made a decided remonstrance. Then when she seized the clothing, bedding, furniture and other things that had been in the rooms of smallpox victims the relatives who expected to inherit the property objected. But neither this nor anything else stopped her until she had thoroughly cleansed and fumigated two of the seven villages and vaccinated every one of their inhabitants.

By that time an account of her performances had reached the other pueblos, and when she and Mr. Shoemaker arrived at the third one morning to begin their work the head chief appeared and refused them entrance. Behind them were ranged the caciques, or priests, the medicine men and the warriors of the village, armed with guns, bows and arrows and other weapons. The chief explained that they were willing to give the Government medicine to the sick whenever Miss McKee prescribed it, but they could not allow her to come into their houses and burn their furniture and sting the arms of their women and children.

Miss McKee tried to explain the object of vaccination and the benefits to be derived from disinfecting, and she warned them that unless they permitted her to have her way the whole tribe would die of the plague. Her words had no effect. The inhabitants of this and the five other villages absolutely refused to allow her to enter them. She immediately sent for Mr. Hazlett to come over from the Navajos, and persuaded him to telegraph to Washington for the assistance of troops. Secretary Hitchcock presented the matter to Secretary Alger, and the commanding officer at Fort Wingate was instructed to send a company of men immediately to Moqui to defend Miss McKee and enforce her orders. They should have arrived there by this time, and it is a pity that a Kipling could not go with them to describe the scene that is occurring about now, with a delicate little woman as the hero instead of the British officer, in the thrilling tale that he tells of the attempt to enforce vaccination among the natives of India. The Government is going to stand by Miss McKee if it takes every soldier left in our territory, and the Moquis have got to be vaccinated.

It would have been a blessing if Miss McKee had undertaken this duty twenty-five or thirty years ago, for smallpox is almost always epidemic among the Pueblo Indians, and no attempt has ever been made before to vaccinate them or fumigate their houses.

There are twenty-six other pueblos in Arizona and New Mexico which are also suffering more or less from smallpox, and Dr. McKee's example will doubtless be followed by the other agency physicians.

Dr. Mary H. McKee is a Pennsylvanian, and was appointed physician at Keams Canyon, Ariz., in January, 1891, with a salary of $1000 a year. She is about thirty-five years of age, slight of stature and of delicate physique. She has, however, shown a great deal of courage, zeal and efficiency, and ranks high on the records of the Indian office.

Three Horses' History.

A correspondent who has been quietly tracing the career of a mare sold last September by her Wisconsin breeder to a Chicago dealer for $200, writes us that she was disposed of in New York a few weeks later for ten times that sum, and took four prizes at the Horse Show. A pair of horses bought by the same dealer from the same breeder last January for $250 were sold in New York less than a month after for $900. In each case the animals had been doctored, and their names changed—changed twice, so far as the mare is concerned, which made it rather difficult to work out the facts.—Albany Country Gentleman.

Shrewd Donkey Boys.

The donkey-boys of the Nile deserve a book all to themselves. Such craft! Such flattery! Such knowledge of human nature! With unerring sagacity they discover your nationality and give your donkey names famous in your own country. Never will an Englishman find himself astride "Yankee Doodle" or "Uncle Sam," or an American upon "John Bull."

"What's the name of my donkey?" asked my companion.
"Cleveland," came the answer like a flash.
We were enchanted.
"And what's the name of mine?" I asked.
"McKinley!"

Then we shouted. You have no idea how funny it sounded to hear those two familiar names in such strange surroundings. We nearly tumbled off in our delight, and those clever little donkey-boys are quick to watch your face and divine your mood.—Lillian Bell in Woman's Home Companion.

Girls Bring About a Dress Reform.

The girls working in the tin-plate mills at Bridgeport, Ohio, and in Martin's Ferry have won a great victory over the men, and full dress during working hours is required. It has been customary for many years for men working around the furnaces to remove their shirts during the hot summer weather. Now, however, the girls in tin houses have to work in the same inclosure, and they made indignant protests without avail. The girls finally got together on the subject, and at a secret meeting decided that the men must wear shirts or they would quit in a body. This ultimatum was sent to the office by a committee, and the result was that orders were posted forbidding men to remove their shirts in the rooms where the girls work. The young women are highly elated over their victory and propose to have other dress reforms before long.

Carrying His Coma Plate.
Captain D. F. Penington, quartermaster of the Fourth Regiment, Maryland National Guard, will have a simple, scarcely visible, plate on the breast in which he is to be buried. The plate will be a Russian coin, size of the old-fashioned "cartwheel" copper pennies so numerous years ago.

Captain Penington has had the face of the coin made smooth and inscribed as follows: "D. F. Penington. Born September 8, 1847. Died —"

This plate forms the captain's pocket-piece, and ever serves as a reminder of death. This popular Guardsman gives his friends a genuine case of "cold shivers" every time he exhibits the coin.—Baltimore Sun.

Half a Year's Receiverships.

The Railway Age, of Chicago, has compiled the railroad receivership statistics for the past six months. Five roads, with a total of 852 miles and a bonded and stock indebtedness of $46,000,000, were placed in receivers' hands from January 1st to June 30th of the present year. Of this sum, one road, the Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf, contributed nearly $48,000,000, and it was also accountable for all the mileage except seventy miles.

Why She Blushed.

Of course she was indignant when it dawned upon her that some one was trying to flirt with her. Yet there was no denying the fact that the man behind her had kept steadily after her ever since she had left the street car.

"And he's old enough to be in better business," she said to herself, indignantly. "I'll cross the street just to make sure whether he is really following."

She crossed the street and so did he. Then she turned on him.

"Sir," she said, "why do you persist in following me?"

He started, as if disturbed in the midst of some abstruse mental calculation, and for a minute seemed bewildered. Then he bowed courteously and said:—

"Madam, why do you persist in preceding me?"

Two doors further on he turned in, producing a latchkey as he did so, and showing in other ways that he had reached his destination. She turned back and went round the block rather than pass that house and her face was still red when she reached home.—Chicago Post.

A Remarkable Elephant.

Elephant intelligence is about "up to the limit" in animals, and an Englishman tells of one that was accustomed to receiving pennies that it would drop into a slot for a biscuit. If given a half-penny the elephant would throw it back contemptuously, but one day a boy gave it two half-pennies at the same time. For several minutes the animal held them in its trunk as though pondering over their value. At last he dropped the two together into the slot, with the result that he got the biscuit. He appeared to know that he had made an unusual discovery and frisked around in the greatest delight.—Detroit Free Press.

PERFECT WOMANHOOD

PERFECT womanhood depends on perfect health. Nature's rarest gifts of physical beauty vanish before pain.

Sweet dispositions turn morbid and fretful. The possessions that win good husbands and keep their love should be guarded by women every moment of their lives.

The greatest menace to woman's permanent happiness in life is the suffering that comes from derangement of the feminine organs.

Many thousands of women have realized this too late to save their beauty, barely in time to save their lives. Many other thousands have availed of the generous invitation of Mrs. Pinkham to counsel all suffering women free of charge.

MRS. H. J. GARRETSON, Bound Brook, N. J., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with the best results and can say from my heart that your medicines are wonderful. My physician called my trouble chronic inflammation of the left ovary. For years I suffered very much, but thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kind advice, I am today a well woman. I would say to all suffering women, take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and your sufferings will vanish."

Mrs. MAOON PHILLIPS, of Ladoga, Ind., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—For four years I suffered from ulceration of the womb. I became so weak I could not walk across the room without help. After giving up all hopes of recovery, I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and wrote for special information. I began to improve from the first bottle, and am now fully restored to health."
